You are warmly invited to take part in a 'long-time-since-never-before-heard' event. Wherever you are in the world, step outside before Dawn on 1 April and feel your way into singing some notes, or playing a flute or drumming or make music some other way you have not heard yourself sing or play before. Or/and just sing the way that feels right for you. Imagine going to a local park, or garden; or wandering in the hills, by the sea, canyons, desert, rainforest, plains, and by the rivers, in a city street. Imagine everything around and above is alive and expressing her/him/itself. You might be with yourself or with your family or in a group that morning. Listen to the beings or the silence around you and allow yourself to feel song coming through your body as an offering to this hungry Earth. You may not know what notes will come, just allow them. You may feel a response within you through feelings in your body; words might come, you may hear 'something' happening around you with birds, wind, in trees perhaps. Imagine creating a butterfly effect when you may never fully know the impact of your song...you may make all the difference in the world, infact, trust you are. Record and post your experiences on facebook...be creative... words, poetry images, video, stories....

Go to earthsongwave.com website and facebook page for information. This is not a fundraising event. This is a self-organising event, open to all.
